What I Learned

These exercises helped me understand how a grid keeps elements organized and aligned, while hierarchy helps guide the viewer's attention. I used these ideas later when arranging the text, images, and other elements in my travel poster.

04 Poster Reference Study

Reference 01 - Dubai Travel Poster

VISIT

Dubai

ATLANTIS & THE PALM

Opulence without limits.

@island_destinations

What I Like

I like how minimal the poster is and how one main visual element clearly represents the place and its identity. The text “Dubai” is prominent and placed behind the building, which immediately draws attention to the destination. At first glance, we can understand both what the place is and where it is. I like how simple and classy the poster feels while still showing the beauty and identity of Dubai.

What Design Principles It Demonstrates

This poster demonstrates balance, contrast, and simplicity. The single main visual communicates the destination clearly without needing many elements. The contrast between the “Dubai” text and the background image makes the main text stand out while still allowing the visual to remain the focus.

What I Can Learn / Use

I learned how to use typography effectively over a visually heavy background. Even with a detailed image, the right text placement and typography can remain clear and prominent. I also like how the poster stays simple and classy despite using a strong visual.

What I Will NOT Copy

I probably will not use only one main visual, especially as a full background image. Although it looks good and keeps the design minimal, I want to explore a slightly different visual approach in my own poster.

What I Like

I like the way this poster shows one of the most beautiful places in India as the main background visual and then adds smaller images underneath, creating a blend of different visuals. The large, chunky text at the top gives the poster an adventurous and energetic vibe. The yellow color also adds energy and makes the message feel motivating. The dark background gives the poster a more premium and bold feel.

Design Principles

This poster uses hierarchy, alignment, contrast, repetition, and proximity. There is a clear hierarchy between the main heading, the main visual, supporting text, and the button. The elements are well aligned and centered, which makes the composition feel organized. The yellow and white colors create good contrast, especially with the dark background. The repeated use of yellow and white also creates consistency. Proximity is used by grouping the smaller images together in the middle section.

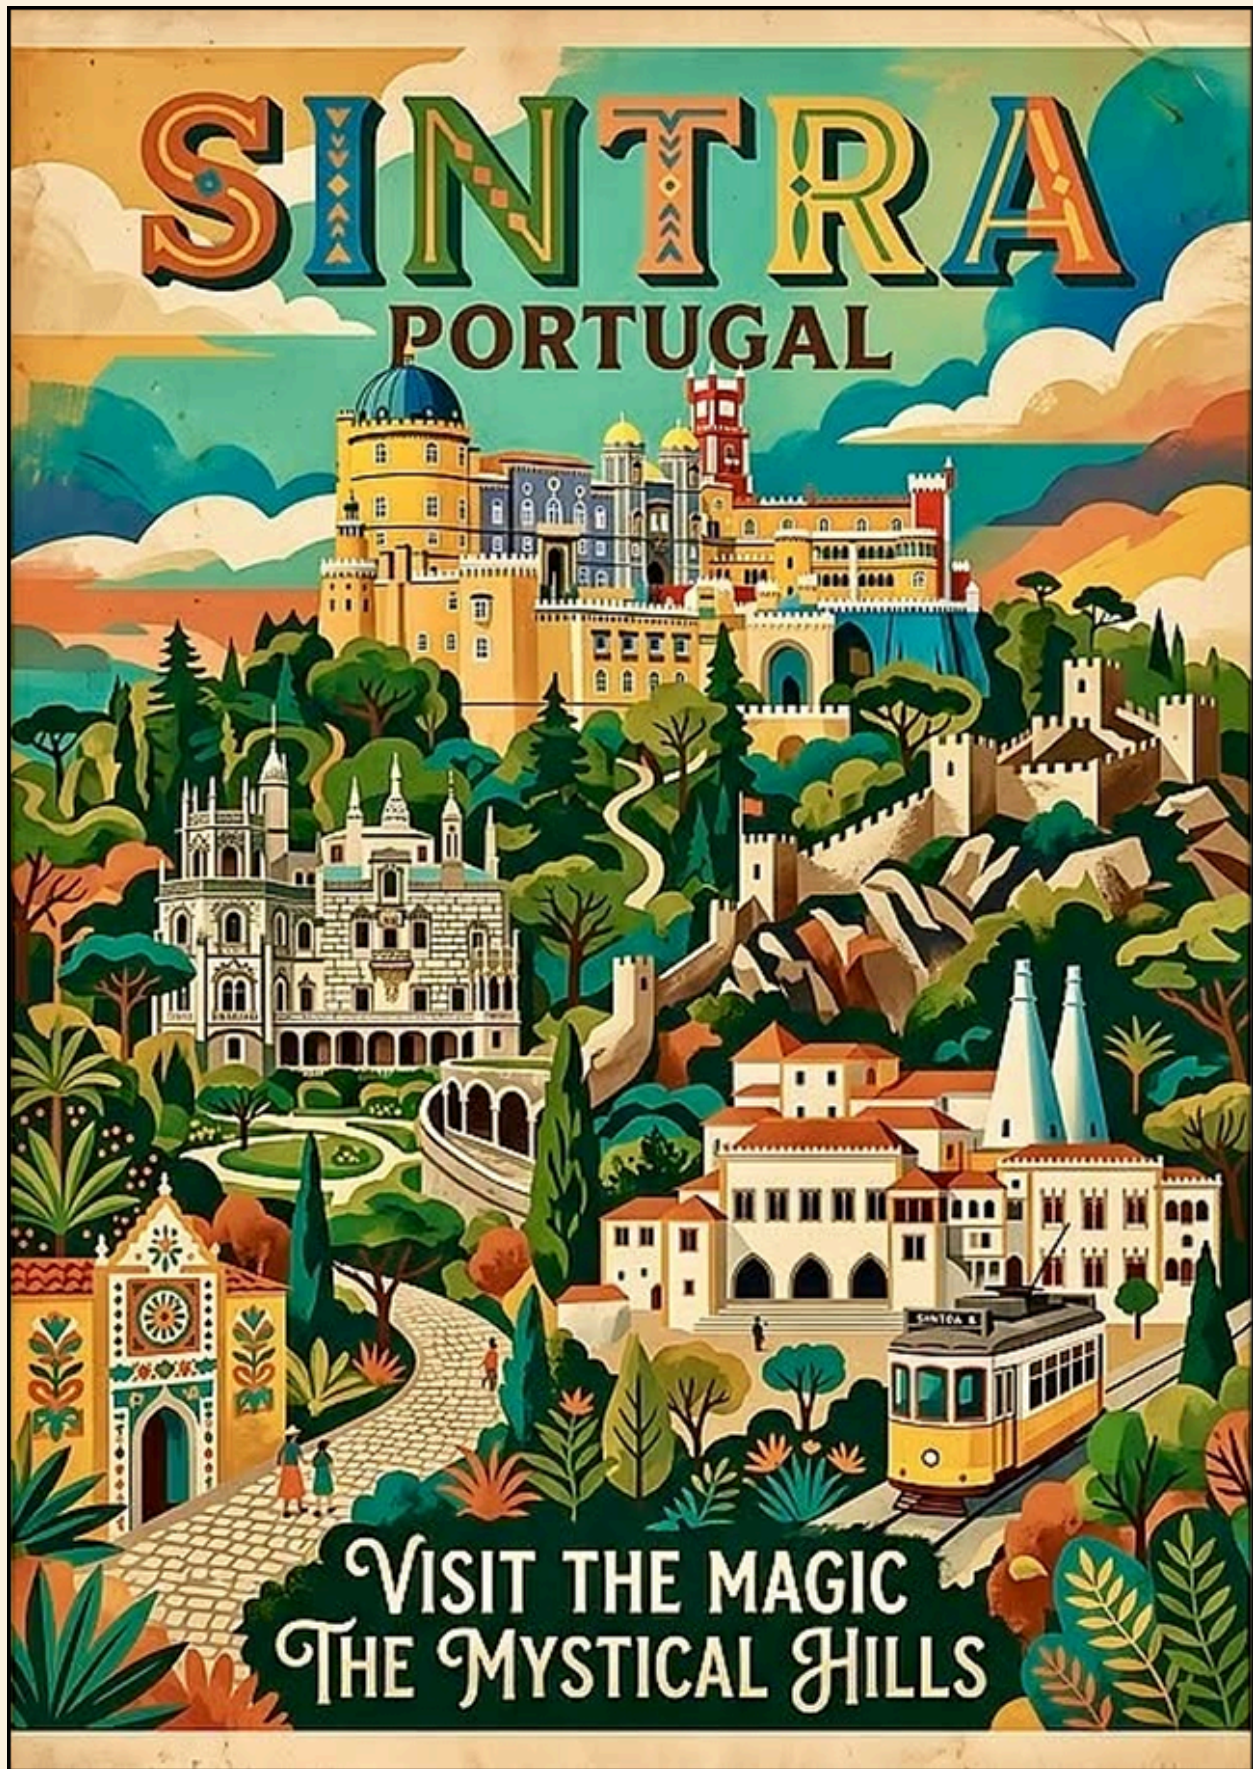

What I Can Learn

I really like the way the images are combined, especially the use of one main image with smaller supporting images. I might use a similar approach in my own poster. I also like the large, chunky title because it gives the design an adventurous vibe. The dark background creates a premium feeling, so I may experiment with a similar dark color scheme.

What I Will Not Copy

I like the numbered elements at the bottom, but I will not use the same approach because it does not fit the direction I want for my own poster.

Reference 03 - Vintage Travel Poster

What I Like

I like how colorful this poster is and how the background and colorful visual elements create a lively and attractive feeling. Even though it uses many colors, the poster still feels visually interesting and enjoyable to look at.

Design Principles

This poster is very colorful, but it still uses hierarchy, alignment, contrast, and visual organization to communicate its message. The text at the top and bottom creates a clear hierarchy. Even with a very colorful background, the designer uses the size, placement, and contrast of the elements to make the important text noticeable. The large, chunky typography also adds visual impact.

What I Can Learn

This poster helped me understand how a very colorful design can still communicate its main message effectively. I like how the designer uses darker colors and visual organization to make the important elements stand out even within a colorful composition.

What I Will Not Copy

Although I really like the colorful style, I will not use this many colors in my own poster. Having colorful text on a colorful background can make readability difficult for some viewers, so I will use a more controlled color palette and make sure there is enough contrast for readability.

07 Layout Exploration

Layout Variation 01

RAASTA

Every road has a story.

CULTURE • HISTORY • HERITAGE

EXPLORE LAHORE →

A full-background hero image creates an immersive first impression, with the branding and supporting content layered over the image for a strong travel-poster feel.

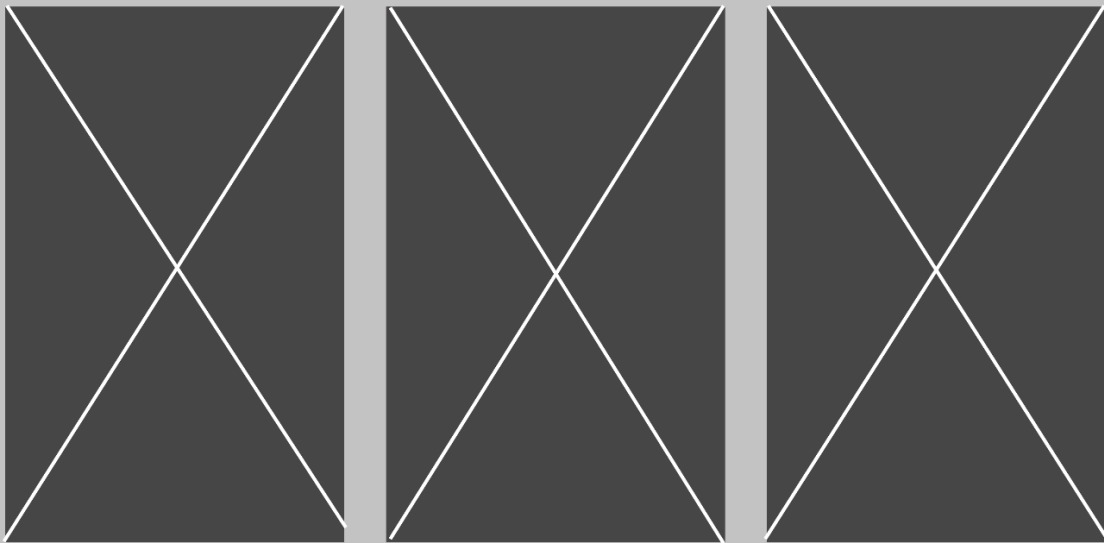

Key Decisions

- Large hero image used as the main visual focus.
- RAASTA and tagline placed prominently above the supporting message.
- CTA placed at the bottom for a clear finishing point.

Layout Variation 02

RAASTA

Every road has a story.

CULTURE • HISTORY • HERITAGE

EXPLORE LAHORE →

A row of three Lahore images creates a structured visual sequence, with the main text above and the CTA below for a clean and balanced composition.

Key Decisions

- Three images arranged in a row to highlight different aspects of Lahore.
- Main branding and message placed at the top to establish hierarchy.
- CTA placed at the bottom to guide the viewer toward action.

Layout Comparison

The first layout creates a more immersive and dramatic travel feel through the large hero image, while the second feels cleaner, more structured, and modern with the three-image sequence. Comparing both helped identify the second layout as the stronger direction for the final poster because it has a clearer composition and better matches the chosen visual reference.

11 Final Selection

Final Poster

EXPLORE LAHORE →

Why This Direction Was Selected

This direction was selected because the teal background, cream typography, and three-image layout created a clean and modern look while keeping the cultural and travel feel of Lahore. It also matched the visual style and strong composition of my second poster reference, making it the strongest direction for the final design.

Final Design Characteristics

Brand: RAASTA

Destination: Lahore

Style: Desi + Modern + Premium

Typography: Bebas Neue + Inter

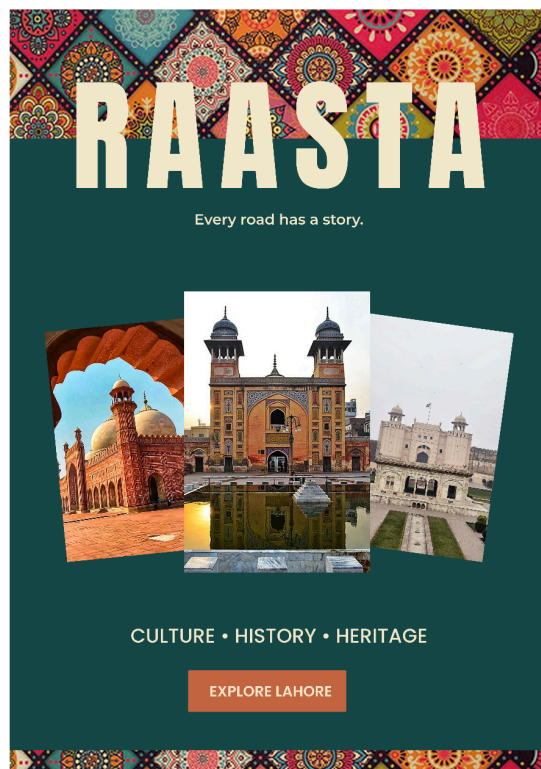

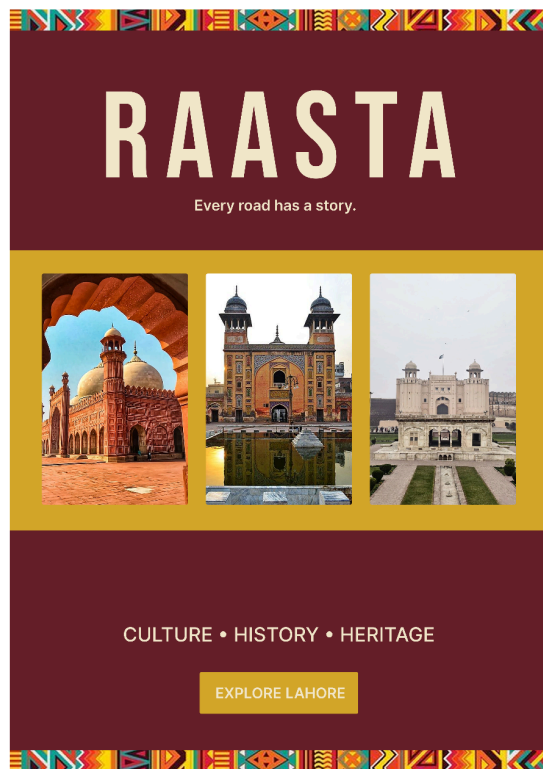

Color Palette: Deep Teal • Terracotta • Soft Sand

Grid: 6-column

CTA: Explore Lahore

12 Other Explored Direction

Alternative Poster Exploration

Why It Was Not Selected

Both alternatives had strong cultural elements, but the maroon and mustard version felt more traditional and visually heavy, while the teal version with desi patterns felt slightly busy. I chose the simpler teal design because it created better balance and a cleaner, more modern and premium look while still keeping the cultural feel through the Lahore imagery.

13 Conclusion

Design Outcome

The project allowed me to explore different typography, color and layout combinations before selecting the strongest visual direction. The final design combines Lahore's cultural identity with a modern and professional travel-poster style.

Final Takeaway

This process helped me understand how small design choices can change the overall look and message of a poster. I also learned to make design decisions based on purpose and visual communication rather than just appearance.
